

Astrology / Libra in men...

Ugh I just feel like libra placements in men... makes them so conditioned by their community to pick partners and jobs and houses and clothes and hobbies that others will either approve of or more be impressed by. Like libra male is so manipulatable, because if their friends opinion is bad, they will likely not do the thing or stay with the person or whatever it is. And that's so shitty and low-key boring because ethyl typically will not have as much exposure to people from different walks of life, beliefs, styles, temperaments, etc. What I mean is specifically they could be around different cultures however they won't be outside of the realm of again what they're friends and family etc. would deem as 'cool' 'awesome' 'acceptable' 'successful'. You feel me?

Whereas female Libras tend to push the limits more and rebel or explore themselves and the culture and the options of the world, however I do still see the above with women. It's just that in a patriarchy women have to do whatever it takes to make their life good for themselves and that can push these Libras to force them outdid what their friends and family "approve of" or want for them. Whereas it's much much easier for the men to live within these parameters but also men are just more conditioned to fall in line and women are natural rebels IMO once we need to or see the other side. Basically libra men like many men have a harder time opening their mind and being flexible to different states of reality and how that might look in the physical aspects of appearances, spiritual or religious beliefs, music taste maybe, food, etc.

AND is you want to be around one of these libra men or people you are at the mercy of their community!! Which fucking sucks because you might not know any of those people who are pulling the puppet strings essentially for this person you are supposed to be in a private partnership with. No it's not them, it's the people around them.
