

Small Wisom And Nonsense / Young men particularly

Don't seem to operate with the knowledge that most people don't have the same information they do. Everyone is on their own algorithm and has their own passions focus and alignments that pull them toward having different areas of focus and experiences. All these things then define and curate our mental landscape and then we operate and speak out from this internal landscape which people can often assume is the reality of the whole world but it is only the reality of their own head. Down to the smallest detail or the up to the biggest most important things you cling to as truth. It's all relative and it's all lies or make believe or non existent to another person.
